RAPE TORTURE KILL: A Harley Piezo Mystery

Synopsis

Tied-up and sadistically murdered, but for what reason? It's a signature crime. It's a fresh crime, but maybe with roots more than a decade old. The victims are hardly similar though - different genders, different ages, and more than a thousand miles apart. The investigators could make sense of the first crime, and believed they knew who did it although they could not prove it. The second murder does not play the same way, not even close other than the method being a precise match. A federal judge's son was murdered. 'Cyanide' Don Wills is one of the nation's leading death sentence judges. His son Chris was a likable, and kind environmental lawyer. Innocent victims. Professional athletes. Polo fields to baseball diamonds. Harley Piezo, PI, chases every probable clue as he is desperate to solve this murder. It's a case so dangerous prayers wouldn't matter if they were prayed. Piezo stumbles into a hiding place, but he's caught. Stun guns jolt and bullets fly, but no one knows other than those on the scene. This is Harley Piezo's most difficult case. Judge Wills wants the murders killed vigilante style. The killers want to sado-slay Piezo. Don't turn off the lights, and don't put this book down. Enjoy.
