All Mountaineers Are Libertarians

Synopsis

This is a book about a very special people West Virginians. The purpose of writing this book is not to convince you to vote for me for governor although that would be nice but rather to encourage you to expand your thoughts about the future of our state, especially as it is guided by current conventional political forces; and, to encourage you to re-evaluate your historical autonomic reactions to political issues and political presence, especially as you make your voting plans. This is Your State your voice is a powerful force in creating the future. You do not have to be limited by only a few or just two choices offered to you by politicians or bureaucrats. This is Your State and you have the right and the obligation to make it great, apart from the limited dictates of only two perspectives, two points of view, two political poles, the two entrenched political parties. Think about it our society and economy are based upon having multiple choices, not just one or two, and exercising those choices by our free will why is politics the only place where there are only two choices. We are providing you with another new, progressive and productive option.

David Moran is a Farmer, a Shepherd to Sheep and Alpaca on his mountain-top natural-fiber farm in Eglon, West Virginia. Being a farmer is the most difficult, demanding, tiring and rewarding job he has ever undertaken. But this is just one in a long lifetime of demanding positions he has held. David is an engineer, an hydrodynamicist, educated at MIT, and was awarded a doctorate in hydrodynamics. He has served as a Full Professor at the United State Naval Academy, and also at George Washington University on the adjunct faculty. He currently holds an equivalent position at West Virginia University. He also served Harvard University, JFK School as Senior Official for National Security. He is a graduate of the Federal Executive Institute, and a graduate of the Brethren Ministerial Development Program. David Moran campaigned for Governor of WV in 2012 as a Libertarian after he succeeded in a petition drive across the state to attain ballot access. His campaign returns in the state election ensured that the Libertarian Party would continue to have ballot access as an Official Political Party in West Virginia through the next election cycle. He also campaigned for Congress in 2006 in the First Congressional District. His professional experience in management, research and development include being President of Technology International Partnerships 1998-2016. He was President of the National Technology Transfer Center (NTTC). He served as Director, Industrial Outreach, Advanced Technology Office of Naval Research (ONR). Dr. Moran was Assistant Technical Director at the David Taylor Research Center. Dr. Moran served as the founding Director, David Taylor Institute, Department of the Navy. He was also Director of Research at the David Taylor Research Center. Dr. Moran was Head, Ship Dynamics Branch DTRC. He served the Navy as the Program Element Administrator, Research & Dev. Naval Material Command and he served as Research Naval Architect in the US Navy. Volunteerism is the highest priority in his busy life: David and Lori serve as Read-Aloud volunteers at Aurora Elementary School. He has served as President and Office.

Dr. Moran has captured the triumphs and struggles of running as a third party candidate in this easy to read and engaging book. All Mountaineers are Libertarians is a great primer to the philosophy of libertarianism and a great look at how candidates running under third party banners can make the best of their limited dollars and media exposure and make the most of their campaign by doing what is important . . . being honest and interacting with the people.

This is a unique and superb read. Instead of taking the path of our current prominent politicians who insult each other while playing as talking heads to the hypocritical media, Mr. Moran has produced a very readable book on who he is, what his moral and ethical values are and how he plans to address the key political, economic and social issues within the state of West Virginia when elected. All Mountaineers Are Libertarians should be a political primer for all American voters who want to cut through the nonsense and get to the meat of the issues. All Mountaineers Are Libertarians is the first time I really understood the Libertarian philosophy and how a third party is absolutely necessary to give Americans a choice rather than the 'same old thing' we get from crony capitalist and self-serving power mongers. This book is written in plain English and offers great insight into something missing in our faltering nation - a new choice in leadership based on personal integrity, true justice, and an even playing field for opportunity for all instead of the sham of guaranteed outcomes. Growing government intrusions into our daily lives is a disease. All Mountaineers Are Libertarians offers us a no nonsense return path to what's most important to all true Americans - . a return to personal FREEDOM.

This book by David Moran is the real future of leadership in America. Dr. Moran is taking the lead in helping all of us Americans understand that we need to think for ourselves, not just choose between two existing but mutually disruptive conventional alternatives. David Moran is giving us an option for the future of this nation through his leadership in West Virginia. We must all follow his lead and prepare ourselves to take responsibility for our personal, family, community, and state and then national futures through dedication and commitment to honest human endeavor. Thank you David Moran for your leadership and your courage in facing the real problems that we all have.

I read this short book on politics in the Mountain State. The economy is hurting, people are angry and feel disenfranchised, optimism is lagging. What to do about it? First, stop the bleeding. Recognize the problem is too much government. Here, David Moran prescribes a libertarian approach for the future with vignettes from his first go-round as a candidate for Governor in 2012. It's easy to read, down-to-earth, obviously sincere, and thoughtful. This is not a book for professional "politicos," it's for the average citizen who wants to make our state better. Buy the book!
