Meehan, executive director of the Minnesota Association of Scholars, has undertaken the daunting responsibility of assembling a comprehensive bibliography of the writings of William F. Buckley Jr. Beginning with Buckley's first book, God and Man at Yale, published in 1951, and ending with his writings in 2000, this bibliography contains citations to over 1500 publications. The bibliography is chronologically arranged by chapters on articles published in National Review, articles published elsewhere, nonfiction books, fiction books, obituaries, essays and contributions to books, syndicated newspaper columns, introductions and forewords to books, book reviews, and movie, music, and theater reviews. Citations include the title, source, date of publication, and page number. If the title does not supply the subject, a keyword annotation is included. Users who ignore the preface, which explains how to read the citations, may have a hard time with this book. For
