Star Crest Skydiver's Guide: Art Of The Small-way Skydive (Volume 2)

Synopsis

The Star Crest Skydiver's Guide is written for licensed skydivers participating in Star Crest and speed star group jumps. The guide works to build skills in small-way formation skydives with 6 to 16 jumpers. Small-way formations range from quick and simple speed-stars, to organized SCR (Star Crest Recipient) jumps, to free-fly and hybrid formations such as vSCR (vertical Star Crest Recipient) jumps. Star Crest formation jumps provide a means for skydivers to learn and improve their skills in group relative work. These basic skills open the door for more advanced activities such as sequential relative work, bigway formations, and other forms of group relative work performed today. Each Star Crest award recognizes an individual's increased skills in working with a group of jumpers. This guide provides information for participating in small-way group skydives, templates to help leaders organize group events, plus background reference materials and resources.

Jack Davis first leaped out of an airplane many years ago and was one of the early jumpers with a four digit USPA skydiver's license. After a respite for kids, career, and mortgages he returned to skydiving and for the past six years has been once again flying high. In the Star Crest Skydiver's Guide, Jack shifts focus from his professional background in the tech industry to the passion and fun of "small-way" formation skydives. The book builds on the inputs from experienced jumpers, organizers, his own experience along with a selection of written and web resources. The book illustrates techniques, answers questions, and organizes resources for skydivers looking to build their skills on their way to even larger "bigway skydiving". Jack lives near Seattle, WA with his wife (and best friend) Carol along with their mellow polydactyl cat MacGyver.
